> Ghāfir 40:60.

The Qur’an is full of duʿāʾs: the words of the prophets and the righteous when they were in need, in fear, in hope and in gratitude. Allah recorded them so that we would use them. They are the best words to ask with, because they are the words of Allah, and He praised the people who said them.

This booklet gathers thirty-six duʿāʾs from the Qur’an, grouped by need, each with the Arabic text of the verse, a transliteration, the meaning, who said it, and the reference. The Arabic is the text of the muṣḥaf; the transliteration is a help for those still learning to read.

The etiquette of duʿāʾ

Begin by praising Allah and sending ṣalāh on the Prophet ﷺ (at-Tirmidhī, 3477). Ask with a present heart and certainty that Allah will answer (at-Tirmidhī, 3479).

Do not be hasty, saying “I prayed and was not answered” (al-Bukhārī 6340, Muslim 2735). Allah answers in the way and at the time that is best.

Look for the times of answer: the last third of the night, between the adhān and the iqāmah, in sujūd, while fasting, on Friday, and when travelling.

Duʿāʾs from the Qur’an may be said in sujūd and in the prayer as duʿāʾ, but a Qur’anic verse is not recited in rukūʿ or sujūd as recitation (Muslim, 479).
